

BROOKLYN PLAY-HOUSES.

Art Robson in "The Henrietta"
at the Park.

"The Directory" at the Columbia—
"Natural Gas" at the Grand Opera-House.

Art Robson began the second week of engagement at Col. Stan's Park Theatre, Brooklyn, last evening, with a revival of Haward's excellent comedy, "The Henrietta." Mr. Robson assumed his old character of Bertie the Lamb. Mr. Robson owed the hit he formerly made in the part, Mrs. Robson was very clever as the sister. Good support was rendered by the members of the company.

COLEMAN THEATRE.
The City Directory, interpreted by John and his comedians, amused a good-sized audience at the Columbia Theatre last evening.
The comedy was last seen in Brooklyn, ably the introduction of Lydia Yeamans as in her taking specialties. Amelia Ver, who is quite a favorite in Brooklyn, acted very gracefully. New songs and ruses have been introduced. Others in company who did good work were Luke Colcraft, Dan Daly, Add Hyman, Tryon
Ver, Julius Wilmar, Nellie Parker, Ethel
Wood, Kate Hart and Margaret Fitzpatrick.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.
Natural Gas" illuminated the Grand Opera-house last evening. Donnelly and Glas Christopher Huff and O'Rourke kept audience in good spirits the entire evening. Many new songs, dances and other spectacles have been introduced, and the female parts of the cast displayed some attractive costumes. Amy Ames did a clever character work in the role of Kitty O'Connell. Others in the cast were Ida Rock, our Nigby, Jessie Gardner, Kitty Kersale,
my Burt and Clara St. Maur.

THE AMFITEATRO.
The Gray Mares, which was recently seen at the Columbia Theatre, was last night's action at the Amphiteatro, where it was enjoyed by a large audience of Eastern District theaters. The comedy was in the hands of George Allison, Martin Giroux, Chas.
Latham, Nell Melrose, Jeanie Kennard, Myrtle Dolan, Rebecca Warren and my Burt.

REDFORD AVENUE THEATRE.
O'Dowd's Neighbors, with several new songs and dances and a clever company, was acted at the Redford Avenue Theatre last night. Mark Murphy and James Thorough took the leading parts. Marie Cahill, is a Brooklyn girl, executed several songs in a sprightly fashion, and was applauded. Roger Dolan, Belle Dolan and the other members of the cast did well in their respective parts.

LEWIS AVENUE ACADEMY.
B. Leavitt's spectacular production,
"The Jew and the King," was given at the Lewis Avenue Academy last evening with gorgeous costumes and scenery. Included in the company were Kelly and Ashley, as the clowns, Laurie Rogers, Lottie Casanovi, Theresa
Mar and others to the number of over 70. The ballet was encored.

THE NOVELTY THEATRE.
East Lynne" was revived at the Novelty Theatre last evening by a company headed by Eva Mountford. The old story was in an effective manner and many handsome sets were displayed among the household of the audience, who were touched by the story of the heroine.

HENRY BERGH AND CATS.
Mr. Motives, He Said, Were Not to Be Closely Questioned.

In some way the area of the power of
New York Society for the Prevention Cruelty to Animals seems to be circum-scribed since the death of Henry Bergh, the Chicago Post.

Mr. Bergh did not hesitate to empty an accredited car on a hot day, and if he ceased at times his fellow-men in his for the animal it was a fault that led towards virtue's side.

There was no animal so insignificant as Mr. Bergh's cat, which he had immediately relieved. The cat was not anxious then with uniformed attendants of the Society's jurisdiction. Mr. Bergh might sentiment to his work; it was not unusual.

Mr. Bergh's Judge Daly hurried around the office of the Society to obtain assurance for a cat that, having climbed up a tree, could not climb down, and was likely to starve. Mr. Bergh was all confidence.

"But I should tell you, Mr. Bergh," Judge Daly, "the cat, went up the tree to catch birds."

"My dear Judge," responded Mr.
Bergh, "the cat, went up the tree to catch birds. It will never do to have too many cats in the office of the Society."

What He Feared.
[From Harper's Bazar.]
When you climb to great heights don't you sometimes dread falling and being killed?"
asked.

No," replied the adventurous spirit,
"but I fear most to fall from an immense height and not getting killed."

Better Than No Play.
[From Good News.]
Little Dick: What shall we play now?
Little Dot: Oh, I'm tired out. Let's just pretend we is playing.

Two Sage Remarks.
[From Judge.]
"One-half of the world, I tell you, Mawson, doesn't know how the other half lives."
"That may be so, but as for that, neither does the other half."

Well Awaken.
[From Street & Smith's Good News.]
Mother: Is Johnny Judson well yet?
Little Dick: I guess so. I heard his mamma scoldin' him 'bout morals.

An Expert.
[From Jury.]
"Is Barrows a good editor?"
"Fis. Why, that man can throw a poem into a waste basket twenty feet away from him."
